WHY BANKABLE ENERGIES?

Bankable Energies is one of the only events of its kind designed specifically to address one of the energy sector's most urgent challenges: how to make clean and low-carbon projects investable. In a rapidly evolving energy landscape, bankability is the defining factor that determines whether a project moves from concept to construction.

This event uniquely brings together the global investment community, project developers, suppliers and policymakers to explore the financial, regulatory, and structural conditions required to unlock capital and drive energy projects through to Final Investment Decision (FID).

Through direct engagement with senior investors, energy executives, and regulatory leaders, participants gain perspectives on the shifting dynamics of energy finance and regulation. These conversations are brought to life with practical case studies, financing models, and risk mitigation strategies, all designed to remove the barriers that stall progress.

Whether you are a policymaker, developer, supplier or financier, Bankable Energies helps you unlock the insights, networks, and strategies needed to turn project ambition into investable action.
